The PASEO: All the Facts About Outdoor Art Fest in Taos

The much-anticipated festival begins on September 25, 2015

TAOS N.M. – Last week, a 31st art installation was added to the list of new media, performance, and installation artworks that will be on view at The PASEO, a 100%-free event in the historic district of Taos on September 25 and 26. Wheel of Fortune, a collaborative piece by Jill Sutherland and Anne Staveley is scheduled for a location in Kit Carson Park. The installation is described by the artists as "an offering of the Major Arcana of the Tarot, a divination tool for daily counsel and companionship." Wheel of Fortune has 22 doors from which audience members select to learn their fortune.

"Follow your intuition, select a door, and invite something to be awakened within you," time-traveling mystic guides within the space urge visitors. "Be brave, Hero. Your destiny awaits..." Wheel of Fortune was first seen at Burning Man, an annual festival in the Nevada desert, in 2014.

Interestingly, 16 of the 31 installations are from New Mexico artists; five of those from Taos. For more information on the artists, schedule of activities and a map of the event, please visit The Paseo Taos.

The Paseo is part of Taos Fall Arts Festival and is supported with grant funding from New Mexico Arts, New Mexico Tourism Department, Taos Community Foundation, Taos County Lodgers Tax, Town of Taos, and The Healy Foundation.
